Numb. 4898

The Daily Courant.

Tuesday, July 2. 1717.

From the Amst. Gazette, dated July 6.

Buda, June 19.

A Great many Barks from Vienna pass daily by here for the Army. From whence an Express is arriv'd to our Governour, with Order to assemble without Delay, as well here and at Pest, as in this County, a sufficient Number of Labourers and Horses for im-barking the heavy Cannon, and all the military Furniture, which have been hitherto kept here for the Siege of Belgrade, Prince Eugene of Savoy having happily pass'd the Danube, and resolv'd to besiege that Place. Admiral Anderson arriv'd here this Evening from Vienna, and we have already sent away 24 Barks laden with Cannon and Ammunition for the Siege of Belgrade. We had Advice from Caransebes, situate three Leagues from the Confines of Wallachia, towards the Iron Gate, which is the Passage from Transilvania, that the continual Rains having damag'd part of that Fort, the Turks upon Advice of it, march'd with 13000 Men to attack our's who were posted there ; but General Viard having Notice of it in Time, caus'd immediately the two Imperial Regiments of Horse of Montecuculi and Sultzbach, which were posted near that Place, with the Rascian Hussars to march against the Enemy ; who seeing them advance, turn'd their backs and rais'd with Confusion, but our Men pursu'd them, kill'd many, and took some Prisoners.

From the Hague Courant, dated July 5.

Vienna, June 22. The whole Army has now pass'd the Danube, and in part invested Belgrade. We shall attack that Fortress with 100 Pieces of Cannon, that is to say, 70 Pieces carrying 24 Pound Ball, and 70 of 12 Pound Ball, with 105 Mortars.

Brussels, July 2. The Conferences upon the Subject of the Magazines and Artillery claim'd by the States General, by virtue of the Barrier Treaty, which had been interrupted for some Days, are renewed here. Thro' the strenuous Representations of the Merchants of these Provinces, against the intended Confiscation of the Estates of those that adhere to the Court of Madrid, which has been so long talk'd of it ; seems to be laid aside, because the Court of Madrid would make Reprisals. The Scarcity of Money in the publick Treasury of these Provinces daily increasing, to remedy it in some manner, and to provide towards the pressing Necessities of the Government, it is propos'd, to cause all the General Receivers of the Austrian Netherlands, who were appointed by King Philip or the Elector of Bavaria, to furnish certain Sums of Money if they will keep their Places. According to that Project, the Treasurer of Ghent, whose Commission is renew'd, must advance for it 100000 Florins at 6 per Cent. Interest, which Sum is to be reimburs'd to him by his Successor ; and these sort of Novelties are founded upon the 28th Article of the Treaty of Rastadt. The States of Brabant and Limburg respectively, have by Memorials to his Excellency the Marquis de Frie, repeated their Instances for the Re-union of their respective Provinces, and for putting down the Court of Justice which was establish'd in that of Limburg, when it was given up to his Imperial Majesty, these States desiring that the Judicature, as well relating to Civil Matters, as in Criminal, should be remitted to the Council of Brabant, as in former Times. There were but three of the Scottish Rebels, who obeyed the Order of his Imperial Majesty to depart his Dominions, the rest continuing still here, and seem to rely upon the known Privileges relating to Asylum, and the Divisions that reign at present among the Burghery.

I am very sorry to have such a Debate as this with the Lord Bishop of Carlisle. But the Necessity of the Case will justify me to the World. In answer therefore, to His Lordship's Advertisement, I must affirm, that I charg'd him with nothing, but what He charg'd Himself with, in Signing his Name to the Truth of Dr. Snape's Advertisement. I am very much surprized that the Bishop, instead of certifying to the World, at that proper Time, that there was a Mistake in the Doctor's Report of His Evidence, should rather chuse to amend the Doctor's Advertisement, by leaving out these or the like Words, (Before it was preach'd.) By which means He made it, in his own Intention, entirely different from the Doctor's Charge, which it was design'd to support ; and yet, in such a manner, that the World should not have any Suspicion but that the same Charge exactly was carried on, in that Advertisement, which was begun in the Doctor's Second Letter. I do not lay Any Part of this upon the Reverend Dr. Snape, because He was out of Town, and this Amendment, (as it is call'd) of His Advertisement was transacted between the Bishop, and the Doctor's Bookseller : And then publish'd with the Doctor's Name to it, after an Alteration of His own Words, of which, I believe, He knew nothing. But this is not all. The Bishop not only did not think fit to refuse to sign to the Truth of that Advertisement, which he might justly have done upon Occasion of Those Words originally in it ; not only alter'd it so, as to leave it to carry on the same Insidious Charge in the Opinion of All who should read it, and yet leave to Himself Another Meaning, to be declared afterwards : Not only this, but He thought fit to sign, This is true, to the Account which the Doctor there gives of what had pass'd between Them before. It is therefore acknowledg'd to be True, under the Bishop's own Hand ; that Dr. Hutchinson of Hammersmith had heard the Bishop relate a Certain Fall ; and afterwards heard Him declare, that He would justify it to the World ; that, upon this, Dr. Snape drew up that Libel against Me, (for so the Law allows me to call it) contain'd in p. 40. of his Second Letter ; that He brought this Libel to the Bishop ; that He read this Libel to him, that the Bishop allow'd Him to publish this Libel, with an Assurance that He would stand to it, and charge Himself with the Proof of the Affirmative of what is there said. I hope therefore, I may be justified in saying that He furnish'd Dr. Snape, and willingly too, with that Load of Infamy, contain'd in that Page : And this, without once speaking a Word to me about the Matter, which might have clear'd the whole at once. Now, that which was the End propos'd in Dr. Snape's Charge, was to prove me guilty of a solemn Falshood in saying, as I had done, God knows, I preach'd it without the Knowledge of Any Man living ; and therefore the Charge was, that it was not preach'd without the Knowledge of Any Man living ; but had been seen by a certain Person BEFORE it was preach'd. This is the very Charge, which the Dr. in his Advertisement, declares He read to the Bishop ; and which He was allow'd by the Bishop to publish ; with the Assurance of His standing to it. And this Account of their concurring together for this good Purpose, the Bishop himself testifies to be true, even at a time when He found fault with some Words in the Advertisement, which again affirm'd it. He heard this Charge read to Him ; He heard it read to Him, that He charg'd Himself with the proof of this Charge : and the Charge was plain, that BEFORE it was preach'd, the Sermon was seen and alter'd ; and could not be easily misunderstood, because, in no other way, it could answer the Doctor's End, in that Libel. His Lordship hath declared this Account to be True, under his own Hand : and consequently declared that the Doctor read that Charge to Him ; and that He took upon Himself the Proof of the the Affirmative; and therefore, did affirm, and undertake to prove, that the Sermon was seen, and alter'd before preaching: which He now, in His own Advertisement, denies that He ever Affirmed. If what the Bishop declared to be True, in the Post-Day of Saturday last, be True; then, He did affirm to Dr. Snape what He allow'd Him, after reading it, to publish. If what He advertised Yesterday be True; then He did not affirm what Dr. Snape saith to my Charge; and the Ductor must again vindicate His own Honour, and Justice. This I am sure of, that Both cannot be True: because the One denies, what the Other affirms. The World surely will take Notice of this Unparallel'd Usage of One, who, in All the Disputes He hath engaged in, hath always abhor'd to bring into the Debate Any Part of the Personal Conduct of These, from whom He hath differ'd: as likewise the Nothing, that this Solemn and Pompous Charge is going quickly to end in. At present, my Lord Bishop of Orville, by his own Advertisement, hath acquited me of the Heavy Charge, laid against me, by Dr. Snape, still some other Issue to be found out. It is now dwindled to quite insignificancy in which A Certain Person, as yet Namis, is to appear very shortly, and quickly, &c. I am not yet a Judge of what hath been surv'd to His Lordship. I believe Dr. Snape thought Himself as certain of what He understood to be surv'd to Him. But this I will surv'e to the World, before-hand, that this New Charge is equally false, and equally groundless with the old; tho' not equally infamous: and will come to an equally glorious End. I am sorry, if I have displeased His Lordship. He himself made it absolutely necessary. I never pretended to compare my Reputation with His Lordship's, or Any Other Man's. But, untouch'd and unsoil'd as it hath hitherto been, I will not suffer it to be unjustly torn to pieces by Any Man living.
